Karen: Do you remember a kid named Grant Simmons from Good Shepherd? I sat next to his parents at a dinner last night. I remembered how nice they were.
me: yeah, he was a really nice kid, totally forgot about him, probably because he was so nice Karen: I remember picking you up after you had spent the night at their house one day and the dad was laughing, so impressed, that you had read the newspaper the whole time you ate breakfast -- little did he know that it had turned into a terrible habit that haunts us all still!
me: oh, right, his house wasn't any fun
Karen: very strict Catholic family I think Karen: Did you make contact with Kim?
me: not yet, I'll call him today
